Mr. Jones also announced that Walter L. Blackhall, acting City Chemist, had made his report on the analysis of the residue of the pewder found at the scene of the fire. The report shows that it was magnesium oxide, which is the substance left after the combustion of powdered magnesium metal, which is an explosive.

Held Murder and Suicide

Special Dispatch to The Tribune WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., July 20.—The official conclusion in connection with the tragedy in Lycoming Creek yesterday, in which Henry M. Shearer, twenty-eight years old, of Attica, N. Y., and his wife, twenty-nine, met death, is that of murder and suicide committed by the husband. This conclusion has been reached by Coroner George L.
Schneider.

been reached by Coroner George L. Schneider.

The bodies of Shearer and his wife were found in the creek about fifty feet from the main highway, about eighteen miles from this city. The discovery was made last evening by autoists who were started out in a search by the crying of the two-and-a-half-year-old daughter in an automobile along the road.

Both Shearer and his wife had deep gashes on the left side of their throats. The belief of murder and suicide is based on the fact that a knife was found in one of Shearer's pockets one of the blades having cloth, and cakes of blood on it. It is the Coroner's belief that Shearer used this weapon to cut his wife's throat, pushed her body into the water and then slashed his own throat, sticking the knife back into his side pocket as he fell.

Geraldine Farrar Sues Husband Widow Clears Again; Says He Owes $9,600 4-Year Mystery

Charges Lou Tellegen With Accepting Loans at Various Times, but He Says They Were All H. C. H. Robinson, of Cotton Paid Back; Third Suit Since Separation

Action No. 3 of the series of court cases growing out of the marriage of Geraldine Farrar to Lou Tellegen has been filed in the Supreme Court. Unlike the two already pending, of which one, by Miss Farrar, is for divorce, and the other, by Mr. Tellegen, is for a separation, the new suit is not strictly a marital affair, but concerns the financial relations of the couple, Miss Farrar alleging Mr. Tellegen owes her $9,600 which she loaned him at varous times.

Mr. Tellegen's reply to the court demand of his wife that he return these loans is that he has repaid them, but Miss Farrar asserts she has no recollection of such repayments. She asked the court to direct Mr. Tellegen to furnish her with a bill of particulars as to the time and place the loans were

Percy S. Straus, of R. H. Macy & Co Special Dispatch to The Tribune
LEXINGTON, Ky., July 20.—A telephone message this afternoon from Nada, Ky., announced the death at his cabin in that mountain town of the Rev. William Rice, fifty years old who voluntarily starved himself to death. Rice is believed to have surpassed the hunger strike record of all modern fasters. He began his refusals to eat May 13 last, and adhered to his determination never to taste food again. His only sustenance has been water. Rice was an itinerant preacher. He declared that on May 13 God appeared to him in a vision and told him not to eat again, as that was the only way in a statement issued last night, said to him in a vision and told him not to eat again, as that was the only way in which he could bring his neighbors to salvation.

Last week he became bed ridden. Last Monday he lost the power of speech. His death came quietly, he seeming gradually to sink to sleep. Rice said just before his voice failed that the devil was always before him with temptations; that he could see the most appetizing food, bht he never wavered in his determination.
